IF INTERVENTION IN MEXICO SHOULD BECOME NECESSARY,
PLANS LONG MAPPED OUT BY WAR COLLEGE WOULD BE USED

If it should become necessary for the United States to pacify and police Mexico, the plans of operation are all mapped out by the war college at Washington. According to these plans, there would be two main troop movements into Mexico. One would be through Texas and into Mexico wholly by land. The second would be over sea to Vera Cruz and from there inland. This second movement, to insure success, would need at least 100,000 men. The proposed movements are shown by arrows on the map.

"I suppose they'll haul me into court for this." General Funston today voiced his satisfaction that after the public fully understood the situation there had been no expression of impatience at failure of expeditionary force to make an earlier start.

It was generally felt in army circles that in consuming only a week in preparing for the march after Villa and at the same time for the defense of the border, the southern department had done fast work. There was a shortage of rolling stock in many sections. There was no large force available at any particular point, supplies had to be transported and mounds for the cavalry had to be added.

El Paso, March 16.—The American expeditionary force which has started to capture Villa dead or alive, has penetrated about ten miles into Mexico, according to more reliable reports received here today.

The military censorship permitted practically nothing but rumors to escape, but it was fairly well established that the advance corps of the American expedition had camped last night in the heart of the desert, which lies between the point of entry and the foothills of the Sierra Madre in the fastness of which mountains Villa is believed to have taken refuge.

Interest at the border in the American advance was overshadowed by the question as to how the presence of the soldiers of the United States on Mexican soil would be taken by Carranza troops. General Calles, the military governor of Sonora, was the "man of the hour" in Mexico.

There seemed no question that a considerable portion of Mexican soldiers and civilians in the north of the republic were bitterly hostile to the action of the United States. The higher civil and military authorities of the Carranza government showed every desire to prevent friction, but it remains doubtful whether they can control the masses of population in the northern district, who are becoming very restless due to the sedulous propaganda against Americans carried on among the ignorant masses.

Columbus, via El Paso, March 16.—The American expedition which entered Mexico yesterday spent an uneventful night in camp, but a short distance across the American line. Carranza to Co-operate.

Washington, March 16.—President Wilson was informed by Secretary Baker early today that both columns of American troops now in Mexico in pursuit of Villa and his bandits, were in the hands of nearly co-operation from Carranza soldiers.

Have Not Joined Expedition. El Paso, March 16.—It was stated at headquarters of General Gaviarra, Carranza's frontier commander today, that no information had been received of any Carranza troops having joined the American expedition.

Chicago, March 16.—Rioting in which stones and other convenient missiles were thrown and the arrest of three strikers on disorderly charges followed the resumption of operations at plant of the Corn Products Refining company at Argo today.

Superintendent Jeffries said he had enough men to operate the plant at its full capacity and that they would be protected by armed guards.

Several shots were fired when a deputy sheriff attempted to disarm a striker. The striker attempted to run away and was pursued by armed guards, who fired a number of shots before capturing him. Nobody was wounded.

MARRIED MEN SCORE
DERBY AND ASQUITH

Mass Meeting in London Calls Upon Premier to Make Good His Pledge to Call Single Men First.

London, March 16.—Premier Asquith and the Earl of Derby were severely criticised at a large meeting here today of married men, who have attested for service in the army. Speakers declared there were still three million men available and married men would refuse to serve until Premier Asquith redeemed his pledge to bring out the single men before the others were called to the colors.

The feeling of the meeting was intensified by the reading of a letter from Mr. Asquith declining to receive a delegation representing the married men on the ground that this was a subject to be dealt with by parliament. The meeting adopted by acclamation resolutions demanding that the premier receive delegations and that all proclamations calling upon married men be withdrawn.

WORK OF RECRUITING
BEGINS IN EARNEST

Adjutant General Appointed Two Hundred Enlisted Men to Aid at 170 Newly Opened Offices.

Washington, March 16.—The campaign to enroll approximately 20,000 recruits for the regular army in the shortest time possible, was in full swing today. By order issued yesterday, 170 auxiliary recruiting stations were opened after having been closed for more than a year.

General McCall has assigned 200 additional enlisted men to the work of organizing the campaign. They have been placed in operation already, fifty-four recruiting depots with which the auxiliary stations are now working in conjunction.

From the auxiliary stations, groups of uniformed soldiers are being sent out to nearby towns, villages and hamlets. They are well supplied with recruiting literature and the system of the United States army is being put into operation.

General McCall was particularly pleased with the speed with which it had been put in full operation. Although no estimates of the number of recruits enrolled yesterday, the first day of the campaign, have been received, unofficial reports tell of lines of men waiting at many stations to present their applications.

Madison, Wis., March 16.—Attorney General Owen today characterized as a "fabrication" the story in the press that he was not a candidate for the supreme court as the result of a "frame-up."

STEAMER TABANTIA HIT BY TORPEDO OR MINE OFF HOLLAND COAST—THREE AMERICANS ON BOARD.

FRENCH LINER FIRED ON

Steamer Patria Attacked Without Warning in Mediterranean While Carrying a Number of American Citizens.

London, March 16.—A Reuter dispatch from the Hook of Holland said that a wireless message has been received there stating that the large Dutch passenger steamship Tabantia, which was bound for Amsterdam to the river Plata, has been torpedoed and is in a sinking condition near the Northhinder lightship. All passengers have been taken off on boats.

The London agents of the steamship Tabantia, which is owned by the Holland-Lloyd line of Amsterdam, have received a message saying the vessel struck a mine and is sinking. Another dispatch said the Tabantia was torpedoed.

The steamship, which is 15,000 tons gross, left Amsterdam yesterday for Buenos Aires. She was to have stopped at Falmouth and peninsular ports, where a majority of her passengers were to have been taken aboard.

A later Reuter dispatch from The Hague says the Dutch ministry of marine has received information that the Tabantia's boats with survivors have reached Northhinder lightship. The Dutch steamship Korsholm, which is standing by, passed an other Dutch steamer which had many survivors on board. A Swedish steamer or also is searching for survivors.

The London agents of the Tabantia state that her crew numbered about three hundred and she carried a general cargo of various goods. A Reuter dispatch from Ymuiden said the Tabantia carried forty-two first-class, thirty-third second class, and eight third class passengers.

"It is now certain that the Tabantia was torpedoed without warning," (telegraphed the American correspondent of the Central News. There were three Americans on board. They were Richard Schilling, Emma Schilling and Carmen Schilling.

Lloyds reports that the Tabantia has gone down and all passengers and crew are safe.

The Hague, via London, March 16.—The Tabantia was still floating at 8.30 this morning. It is uncertain whether she struck a mine or was torpedoed.

French Liner Attacked. New York, March 16.—While carrying twenty Americans among her nine hundred passengers, the French liner Patria, a French steamer, was attacked without warning by a submarine off the coast of Tunis, according to a story told by her captain upon the Patria's arrival here today.

A torpedo fired by the submersible, said, passed twenty feet to the liner's stern. When the Patria arrived some days later at Lisbon, American Consul J. A. L. Jones, who is conducting an investigation for the purpose of notifying Washington of the circumstances of the attack.

Captain Decolles of the Patria said that upon his return to Europe he would apply to the French government for permission to arm his vessel on the ground that submarines in the Mediterranean were not in his opinion refrain from attacking merchant vessels without warning them.

Carried 723 Passengers. At the time the attack occurred the Patria was carrying 723 passengers, of whom 332 were passengers and 391 were crew members.

The steamer took on a large number of passengers at Lisbon and the Azores, and when she arrived here she had a passenger list of 1,961 persons.

KAISER DETERMINED TO AVOID A BREAK,
WORD FROM BERLIN

German Emperor Will Not Defy United States in Submarine Policy Even if Reichstag Opposes.

Washington, March 16.—Emperor William's determination not to provoke a break with the United States in the new submarine campaign, even though it involves a factional contest in the German Reichstag, having already brought about the downfall of Admiral Von Tirpitz himself, is indicated in today's Berlin dispatches.

The general understanding was that the Emperor himself, who decided that every effort should be made to retain the friendship of the United States short of abandoning any principle involving the honor of the German nation. The new power of the Emperor in the proposed extension of submarine warfare to affect neutral nations, Von Tirpitz' retirement followed naturally the rejection of the plans he had fathered.

It is realized in Washington that Berlin is now to witness a conflict between the Emperor and a powerful element in the Reichstag.

The passage of today's Berlin dispatches by the German censor is regarded as showing the desire of the German foreign office to prepare the American people for such a contest in the Reichstag as was recently seen in congress between two factions over the armed ship question.

TAFT TELLS OF PLAN FOR PEACE LEAGUE

EX-PRESIDENT IN ADDRESS LAST NIGHT POINTS THE WAY TO ELIMINATE WARFARE.

HAS A BIG AUDIENCE

Fine Welcome is Given Distinguished Guest by Audience of One Thousand Persons—Release of Philippines Scored in Speech.

Advocating the establishment of a league of nations to enforce peace as the logical lesson to be learned from the present European war, and emphasizing the obligation of the United States to bring forward such a proposal in the interests of neutral nations whose rights have been violated by the belligerents, William Howard Taft of New Haven, Conn., ex-president of the United States, brought a message of real significance to Janesville Wednesday evening. He gave a comprehensive view of this country's international relations and sounded the warning that with so many interests the danger of war and international controversy are ever present.

Judge Taft spoke at the Myers Theatre before an audience of nearly 1,000 persons. He was given a most impressive reception. As he appeared upon the stage he was greeted with a wave of spontaneous applause which he advanced to his seat the orchestra of the students of the state school for the blind played "The Star Spangled Banner." Following the introductory remarks by William H. Dougherty, chairman of the Commercial club promotion committee, which had charge of the arrangements for the occasion, Judge Taft spoke at length and with applause while the audience rose to listen in token of respect.

Address a Masterpiece. Taft's address was a masterpiece, such as Janesville citizens rarely have a chance to hear. It was the message of a great man whose information on national and international affairs is second to no other in this country. His speech was a masterpiece of sarcasm, venom, spite or vituperation. It was a plain, straightforward presentation, calculated to convince. He referred with some feeling to the proposed to abandon the Philippines, the obligation of this nation to Philippine, he scored the pacifists and he indicated that the policy of this nation might be more aggressive in the defense of neutral rights. His speech set before the only ones carrying a tinge of criticism.

Judge Taft arrived in this city shortly before seven o'clock last evening. He was met at the hotel by a committee of the Block County Bar association and upon his arrival in Janesville he was entertained at dinner at the Hotel by the directors of the Commercial club, the members of the club's promotion committee and members of the bar association.

After his address he greeted those who were present in a brief reception on the stage. A reception was held at the home of John M. Whitehead for members of the bar association and others. During his stay in Janesville, Mr. Taft was the guest of his old friend, Judge J. H. Dougherty, who entertained this morning at a breakfast, covers being laid for sixteen. Judge Taft left at eight o'clock for Milwaukee, where he will give an address this evening at the request of the Lithuanian society.

Much credit is due the promotion committee of the Commercial club, composed of Mr. H. Dougherty, chairman, Mr. Sullivan, Oscar H. Blakely, Eugene Croft, A. J. Huebel and Robert Buggs, for the care in which plans for the Taft meeting and reception were made. A feature of the evening was the compliments of a concert given by the school for the blind orchestra during the half hour preceding Mr. Taft's address. The evening was a most remarkable ability and were justly applauded.

A resume of Taft's address follows: "Some of us have had dreams of universal peace since Judge Taft in beginning his address, and we have attempted to make peace through treaties. I had some experience myself in this regard, but when that august body, the senate, rejected them, their own fathers wouldn't have known them."

"Until the European war broke out on the first of August, in 1914, we had become accustomed to tremendous armaments. We had even thought that tremendous armaments didn't indicate war. Because of the expense of these armaments we thought that people would be restrained, but when the storm broke we found how little we really knew about it. I believe that it is pertinent at this time to make use of this war and all its horrors to persuade the people to enter an international agreement to enforce peace."

"The plan which was recently promulgated and accepted at a meeting of a number of interested men in New York city, or to revert to the vicious part of my life, as you would say in politics, the platform proposed to get as many as possible of the great (Continued on page 11).

GASOLINE HIGH; USING KEROSENE WITH POOR RESULT

Rapid Rise in Price of Gasoline Has Dealers Puzzled.—Undetermined as to Future.

Janesville automobilists are not taking kindly to the suggestion that kerosene be used to dispense gasoline as a means of locomotion, at least not kerosene of the quality thus far obtainable for such purpose. Kerosene is said to have been tried out on a number of machines in the state with varying results. It seems to work fairly well on some machines with special types of carburetors and motors but in the general run of automobiles, cannot be used.

It has been found, however, that that two tanks, one for each oil, and the motor warmed up with gasoline, considerable power can be gotten from kerosene after the gasoline has been shut off and this oil used in the motor.

NATIONAL DEFENSE.

United States Senator John W. Weeks, a member of the Military Affairs committee, has this to say on national defense that is worth reading:

"Concerning national defense, I believe congress should immediately develop a plan for the adequate protection of the nation on land and at sea within reasonable cost to the government. This is not the time to be negligent in our expenditures for the protection of the country, but neither is it the time in view of the condition of the treasury to enter upon a program that will call for reckless expenditures. Many of the schemes so far evolved for national defense call for an unnecessary outlay of money, and, of course, these schemes have strong backing from many sources. But it seems to me that if congress will give attention to a system of short enlistments in the army, after which the men who have had military training at the expense of the government shall advance into a first, second and third reserve corps, available for instant use—a fighting force of 500,000 trained men would shortly be at the command of the government at a minimum cost. Two years of rigorous training is ample to fit a man for active service, and every day that he spends in the army beyond that period is an unnecessary expense to the government.

"As to the navy, that, of course, will be a more expensive proposition. I do not so much favor construction of additional dreadnoughts at this time, but I am deeply impressed with the efficiency of the very fast battle cruiser. We have seen it operate in the European war, and among naval experts, I understand, the fast battle cruiser has come into high favor. But there are other requirements which should be met at once, without regard to the European war. In my judgment, the submarine has demonstrated its effectiveness as an instrument of defense, and if we were equipped with a large number of these vessels, together with an ample supply of mines, they would furnish strong reasons why a foreign fleet would hesitate to attack our shores.

"Both the army and navy need a strong armor corps. The aeroplanes are the eyes of the army and navy, and without them no fighting force can be more effective than a blind man in a contest with a man of equal strength, but who is possessed of his sight. But even greater than the necessity for more ships is the need of men. We can't man the ships we now have. If we should suddenly be confronted with war, efficient men could be obtained only with the greatest difficulty. What we should develop is a naval reserve sufficient to man all ships and fill places caused through casualties.

"We have never had a consistent army or navy policy. That is due to our political system, in some degree. The carrying on of our military and naval operations is to such a degree dependent on politics that we can not do even under the best conditions what is done by our rivals on the other side of the Atlantic. We have twice as many navy yards as we need, and they should be abolished without regard to their location. But it won't be done unless there is an outcry from the people demanding it, because the local and political interests will be too strong. We shall not get a definite military and naval policy until we have a board of national defense which shall be independent of political parties."

Taft's Visit.

The reception tendered former President William Howard Taft by the citizens of Janesville on Wednesday evening was in the nature of an ovation to the distinguished visitor that was well merited and received by the recipient with much pleasure.

His address on the subject of "International Peace" was all too short to satisfy the interested audience who would have been pleased to hear more on the subject that was so interesting and timely. Taft has not lost the famous Taft smile and he punctuated his remarks by his facial expression as few men in public life have ever been able to do. He is a graceful, easy talker and with an interested audience such as greeted him last evening, was at his best.

The concert of thirty minutes by the orchestra from the Wisconsin School for the Blind that preceded his talk, was most thoroughly enjoyed and displayed the careful training these blind boys and girls receive at the state school in fitting them for their future life work. The various numbers were most carefully played and brought forth repeated applause from the enthusiastic audience.

Janesville was fortunate in being able to entertain Judge Taft, and the Commercial club is to be warmly commended for bringing him here. It is a big undertaking, but was carried to a successful end by the committee having charge of the program.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

A humorous once rose when the matter of the July Fourth appropriation was being discussed in a certain city, and moved that the money be spent instead on March 17. He thought that St. Patrick's day elicited more real manifestations of enthusiasm.

Other heroes of the Christian religion are recalled by processions, anthems, sermons, and rituals. St. Patrick is remembered in that way, too. But in the popular mind he stands chiefly for a certain festive spirit of good humor and warm friendliness. He is recalled not so much for the 365 churches he founded and 12,000 converts baptized with his own hands, as for the notion of his genial personality handed down from the dim vistas of old history.

The traditional figure of Uncle Sam is by common consent the composite photograph of American temperament. Similarly St. Patrick is regarded as a kind of impersonation and incarnation of the Irish race. It is a kindly figure. Many persons wear the green March 17 who claim no trace of Celtic blood. They merely cherish a friendly feeling for a strain of the American melting pot that is notable for the warmth and ardor of its temperament.

Many of the Irish people have themselves little notion of the dignity of their own heritage. In early history the race was noted for its versatile gifts of poetry, art, music, oratory and chivalry. Economic and political misfortune and oppression reduced the "Old Sod" to poverty. The descendants of kings and chieftains and missionaries were exiled by famine to come over here and build our railroads.

The so-called Gaelic revival is now uncovering the treasures of antiquity, and making the Irish people familiar with their own stock and its achievements. In the land of their adoption, the sons of St. Patrick are showing racial traits of energy and gift for politics and business. And they still display those fervent qualities of mind and heart that characterize their favorite saint.

The people who, a few months ago, did not dare embark on any business enterprise because so many people were out of work, are now cursing their hard luck because they can't hire any help.

Perhaps those labor men at Worcester, Mass., ought not to wear dress suits at their balls, but at present wages they can lend money to help the bank clerks and office men buy them.

President Wilson is overworked and should take a rest, but this does not arouse half as much anxiety as reports from the training camps about the baseball players with lame arms.

The Literary club may not be able to comprehend the works of Henry James, but that is no excuse for not saying, "O, how lovely," when the reading is finished.

PENALTIES FOR COUNTIES DELINQUENT IN TAX PAYING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., March 16.—State Treasurer Henry Johnson is considering the advisability of penalizing those counties who have not remitted to the state treasurer. The last day for remitting was March 13, but a number of counties have not been heard from. The law permits a heavy penalty against the county.

Bread Leavened With Snow.

The use of fresh dry snow as a leavening agent is not new, but the way in which it acts seems to be misunderstood to some extent. The popular explanation is that the raising of the dough is due to ammonia in the snow. As a matter of fact, snow contains but a very slight amount of free ammonia, probably not more than one part in a million. This quantity is, of course, by far too small to cause any expansion of the dough. The leavening action is due to the entangled air in the snow. The air expands on heating to several times its original volume, thus expanding the dough. Steam is formed at the same time and aids in the rising process.—Exchange.

STATEMENT of ROY M. CUMMINGS

TO THE VOTERS:

In the last two articles I have written, it has been my purpose to put before the voters the methods we have employed in transacting city business. I have tried to show that the affairs that have been intrusted to us have been carefully looked after. I have gone into detail only on those matters that have come particularly under my control. During the four years last past, in addition to the other matters mentioned, I have had charge of the public lighting and have consequently given this matter considerable study. About two years ago we made up our minds that we must change our system. The old arc system was out of date, expensive and inefficient. We were paying $50.00 per year, for each arc light and I believe that every citizen, who gave the matter any thought, recognized the need for improvement. The arc lamp did not give a steady and dependable light, it was one time brilliant and at another time dull and the general public was convinced of the inefficiency of the system. In order that we might have the necessary experience, when the time came to make a new contract, we started experimenting in a small way. We began first by putting in the new lights at points which seemed to give an opportunity for trial. When we found that they worked satisfactorily we then began broadening out the area by substituting five of the new lights for two of the old. Wherever these lights were installed we found them generally satisfactory to the citizens. When the time came to make the contract we had completed our period of experimentation and felt warranted in making a complete change in the system. Therefore beginning with May 1st the entire city will be put under the incandescent system rather than the arc. There will be on every corner in the city of Janesville a one hundred candle power tungsten light of the latest patent, properly hung and with other appliances calculated to make the best distribution of light. The one hundred candle power light costs us, for a night and day schedule, $18.50 as against $59.00 for the arc light, and many people believe that the small tungsten light is more satisfactory than the arc. We are certain that the resident district of the city after May 1st will be better lighted than it ever has in the past and for less money. On the down town streets we have adopted the latest system of ornamental street lighting. We will install the single unit lighting standards each carrying a four hundred candle power tungsten light and they will be so placed that there will be a distribution of light every forty two and one half feet. In addition to the ornamental feature we are confident that the business streets will be better lighted than ever before. We expect to install about 130 of the ornamental light standards which will cost us, on a day and night schedule $41.00 per year. The ornamental lighting system will be put in at the expense of the Electric Company, they furnishing all of the materials and labor. The city furnishing the posts and globes, but after the installation the Electric Company maintains the system and replaces any broken globes. The company furnishing all of the cables, lamps and other appliances necessary to complete the system which cost runs into thousands of dollars. The posts were purchased on competitive bids and we know of no city anywhere which received a better price on its posts. We got our own post cast to meet our own specifications, free on board cars at Janesville, for $17.25 per post. Statistics gathered throughout the state show that some cities have paid as high as $100.00 for these ornamental light standards, while none were secured as low as ours. We expect to have the entire system complete just as soon as the Electric company can perform its part of the contract. The posts are being made by the Industrial Foundry Company at St. Johns, Michigan and will be soon ready for shipment.

I feel that it is not at all out of place for me to call attention to the fact that we have given to Janesville a most modern public lighting system at a saving over what it has heretofore paid. Mr. Ford H. MacGregor of the Municipal Reference Bureau of the University at Madison in commenting upon the change said, "I had an idea that more cities were using nitrogen filled Tungsten lamps than apparently are. Your city, I believe, is probably one of the first to discard the old arc system in its entirety, but undoubtedly the rest of the cities will follow suit shortly, as the old arc lamps are greatly antiquated, and expensive to maintain and operate." In handling this lighting question we have endeavored to adopt the latest improved and the best means of giving to our citizens the service to which they are entitled, and we have endeavored to use the same care in all other matters touching the public business and I feel warranted in soliciting the support of all those who believe that we have given to Janesville an intelligent, careful and economical administration. The Primary will be held March 21st and your vote will be greatly appreciated.

Respectfully yours,
ROY M. CUMMINGS.

SPRING COMING FAST WEATHER ARTISTS SAY

But With St. Patrick's Day Tomorrow They Are Perplexed.—Day After Tomorrow One of Snow and Storm.

Janesville weather prediction artists give encouragement. They relate the coming of at least a few balmy days of the true spring type, despite the fact that Old Man Weather sees cloudiness and either rain or snow for Friday. And on Friday true sons of the Old Sod will blossom out in green. Tomorrow is St. Patrick's Day, the occasion dedicated to the patron saint of the land of the shamrock. While local weather prophets disagree with the observatory reports, they realize more or less the folly of their belief for St. Patrick's Day, at least. This day has always been a stormy one during the greater number of years back and it is bright and warm this year will be extraordinary, true Irishmen say.

The northward flight of a large flock of geese, observed shortly after twelve o'clock this noon, and today's climatic change from that of yesterday is assuring, the local experts say. The flock was a large one and entering over the city from the south, it was flying very low. They rose rapidly as the center of the city was passed and at the time seemed to be confused in direction.

Candidates for delegates to political national conventions must have individual campaign committees and the same person or group of persons cannot be appointed to serve as a committee to the ruling made by the attorney general to the secretary of state yesterday.

Most of the candidates for delegates named by the republican state convention in Madison during January were the same group of persons to serve as a campaign committee for a number of candidates for delegates. All candidates are now forced to appoint a new person or group of persons to act as his campaign committee. A number of the democratic candidates and also the democratic candidates for national delegates are hit by the attorney general's decree. They will have to be appointed in each instance.

IRISH PATRON SAINT EULOGIZED TOMORROW

Friday is St. Patrick's Day.—Hibernians and St. Patrick's Congregation in Observation. Janesville lodge division No. 1, Ancient Order of Hibernians, together with the congregation of St. Patrick's Catholic church tomorrow will observe St. Patrick's day, the patron saint of the Irish organization and also of St. Patrick's Catholic congregation. These observances have been held over a period of fifty years in Janesville, since the congregation and the lodge were organized.

The Hibernians will meet at their hall and march in a body to the church, where at 10 o'clock high mass will be celebrated. The Rev. Father Ignatius Conroy, C. P., of St. Louis, is to deliver the eulogy to St. Patrick's memory.

Janesville at large annually pays tribute to the patron saint of the Irish people. A little after noon, a bow or streamer of emerald ribbons, with a large daffodil and flag hats worn in the parade, all portray the tribute to the man whose life is dedicated to advertising his nationality, or descent, but others, too, join in the tribute.

Gall-Bladder Diseases

Cured by the Milk and Rest Treatment

The gall-bladder is a reservoir for the bile and holds about one ounce. It is filled between meals and emptied into the bowel as the food enters it following a meal. It is closely connected to the liver by tubes or ducts. This gall bladder and ducts leading to and from it often become diseased and cause much trouble and suffering. When neglected an operation usually follows and the result is the removal of a much needed gall bladder.

Warning!—The Milk and Rest treatment, taken in time, will save your gall bladder and your health.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME...

Copyright 1915 by Frank H. Spearman.

"They're Beating Us, but I Can Stop Them!"

Resting within the friendly shade of its north wall she espied the crazy old yard switch engine, known reverently among the switchmen as "Soda Water Sal." Soda Water Sal took her disreputable nickname from the fact of her misfortune in being crusted white a good part of the time with alkali.

The excited girl dashed at the top of her speed down the platform and across the yard to rouse the crew and get them to carry her to Rhineland. But though Soda Water Sal stood as peaceful as an old Dobbin munching her nonday repast, the switching crew was nowhere to be found. Beyond a doubt, Helen felt, they were all down town, eating their dinners, and to find them quickly was out of the question. She called out a few times, hardly hoping for a response, and none met her ears. There was steam up, and without loss of time Helen climbed into the cab, and, opening the throttle, gave Sal steam. A venerable mare, struck in the midst of her lunch, with a whip, could not have been more startled than the old engine at Helen's summons. Soda Water Sal started and trembled. Helen touched her heels again.

No such sight as she made was ever before seen on the main line of the Copper Range & Tidewater. If Soda Water Sal had been dancing a two-step on the rails, she could not have plunged and cavorted more wildly.

that she did as often, pushing her to a pace undreamed of in her long and peaceful yard career, achieved a miracle of speed with her.

Up the line, Rhineland, the deputies, the train crew and the engineer and fireman of the stolen engine surrounding the marooned coach, searched the horizon vainly for a sign of assistance. The conductor, the moment after he had raised Helen on the wire and told of their plight out

Monday evening a large audience witnessed "A Rose of Plymouth Town," a Puritan drama in four acts, presented by the Miltonian Lyceum of Milton college. The story of the drama centers about the home of Miles and Barbara Standish in old Plymouth town during 1622-23. Rose De la Noye and her brother, Philip, of France, came under the king's protection of this home. Garret Foster and John Margeson contend for the hand of Rose. The climax comes when the Indians could have captured the colony, were it not for the timely thought of Garret Foster, who guarded the gap in the stockade and thus saved the colony, and won for himself the hand of Rose of Plymouth Town. The scene opens in the second act with Barbara Standish singing the spinning wheel, and Miles reading nearby; Barbara's gentle and motherly admonition to the distracted Rose as they stood before the fireplace, the mirth-provoking love making of the embarrassed Philip to young Miriam, are not easily forgotten. The duel between Garret and John Margeson develops the action for its rapid action. The cast was as follows:

Barbara Standish—Pearl Gardner.
Miriam Chillingworth—Bessie Crandall.
Aunt Absolute—Marion Geogham.
Rose de la Noye—Belle Cartwright.
John Margeson—Leo Laupheimer.
Philip de la Noye—Harold Burdick.
Garret Foster—John Holmes.
Miles Standish—Elwood Frushy.

TAKE A CENSUS OF NEUTRAL FOREIGNERS

Germany May Declare Foreigners Who Have Resided in Country Five Years German Citizens.

London, March 16.—An Amsterdam dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says the municipal authorities in Germany have been instructed to take a census of all neutral foreigners who have lived in each city for more than five years. Male foreigners who have lived uninterruptedly for five years in Germany will be considered as having lost their previous citizenship and will be re-eligible to military service and therefore will be enrolled in the army, but will not be sent to the front. They will be put to work in offices, so as to relieve the handiwork, who will thus be able to take their places in the fighting line. It is said there are about 30,000 foreigners of fighting age in Germany.

Monday evening a large audience witnessed "A Rose of Plymouth Town," a Puritan drama in four acts, presented by the Miltonian Lyceum of Milton college. The story of the drama centers about the home of Miles and Barbara Standish in old Plymouth town during 1622-23. Rose De la Noye and her brother, Philip, of France, came under the king's protection of this home. Garret Foster and John Margeson contend for the hand of Rose. The climax comes when the Indians could have captured the colony, were it not for the timely thought of Garret Foster, who guarded the gap in the stockade and thus saved the colony, and won for himself the hand of Rose of Plymouth Town. The scene opens in the second act with Barbara Standish singing the spinning wheel, and Miles reading nearby; Barbara's gentle and motherly admonition to the distracted Rose as they stood before the fireplace, the mirth-provoking love making of the embarrassed Philip to young Miriam, are not easily forgotten. The duel between Garret and John Margeson develops the action for its rapid action. The cast was as follows:

Barbara Standish—Pearl Gardner.
Miriam Chillingworth—Bessie Crandall.
Aunt Absolute—Marion Geogham.
Rose de la Noye—Belle Cartwright.
John Margeson—Leo Laupheimer.
Philip de la Noye—Harold Burdick.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, with a company of twenty-five other principals, have gone to Savannah, Georgia, where they are at work on a sensational wonderplay, "The Wall Between," one of the most pretentious productions attempted.

Besides the players five hundred regular army soldiers will be used, together with 1,500 negroes who will appear in battle scenes between United States soldiers and an uprising among the blacks of Nicaragua. "The Wall Between" will be produced under the direction of John W. Noble, who is a graduate of West Point and who served seven years in the United States army.

T. R. ASKED TO WRITE PATRIOTIC SCENARIO.

A five-reel play by Theodore Roosevelt. Please do not all grab at once. It has not yet been released. But it has already made its appearance among the possibilities.

Mr. Roosevelt, who has been invited to embody his ideals of vigorous Americanism in a scenario for a multiple reel screen play to be given a spectacular production.

LIKE FARMUM BEST IN BLUE FLANNEL SHIRT.

A California exhibitor held a referendum among his patrons to determine whether they preferred seeing William Farnum in "blue flannel shirt" or "blue flannel shirt." After a spirited battle of ballots the count showed a majority for flannel shirt parts. "Man of Sorrows," latest picture, "Man of Sorrows," now in the making, has been seen as the wealthy, vigorous, athletic, out-of-doors American motion picture patrons like best.

Evidently London and Australia are more appreciative of our own Henry B. Walthall, and real acting than we ourselves are. "The finest dramatic star on the screen" is what a London dramatic critic said of him after seeing "The Avenging Conscience." A recent contest in Australia voted him the most popular picture actor. And yet Francis X. Bushman runs away with the honors in contests here. We can't help London's taste, can we, Francis?

Beverly Bayne

She grew weary of the life of a Chicago society girl and went into moving pictures a few years ago. She has never regretted the move, and today ranks very high among motion picture stars.

Naomi Childers, who is engaged to a candy manufacturer, will be seen before very long in a five-reeler, "The Writing on the Wall."

The Daily Novelette

The Snoots.
To say that loves brings reverent awe, Is but a mild expression.

It also brings a mother-in-law. With consequent depression.

It was the first time young Mrs. Snoots had been away from her husband, and although she loved him dearly, and all that she was having such a nice time at Milly Van Hiltz's house party that she paid no attention to friend husband's letters entreating her to return immediately, as there were holes in all his socks and he was having trouble with the eggs in the mornings.

On Wednesday the 11th when she opened the home town newspaper that Snoots sent her over, she noticed that a small item had been clipped out. She took the next train home.

"George, what is it?" she demanded. "What has been doing to get yourself in the paper?"

"Innocent," replied George. "When you go start in on those socks."

"I won't rest till I find out," vowed Mrs. Snoots, and she hid herself to the office of the Daily Novelette, asked for Tuesday's paper and hunted up the item. It was as follows:

"Personnel: I bet myself $5 curiosity with Mrs. Van Hiltz's time going home for her baggage, Mrs. Snoots took the first train back to Milly Van Hiltz's."

CONSTANCE COLLIER IN "TONGUES OF MEN"

Famous Theatrical Star Makes First Appearance in Picture Plays.

Constance Collier, in her first appearance in picture plays at the Apollo yesterday, was magnificent. She has vitality, gracefulness, poise, a sense of humor and beauty that pictures forth in this play like a jewel.

Miss Collier is supported by a satisfying cast including Forrest Stanley. The story was written for her especially and the picture contains a deal of good sense and quiet cleverness. Morosco gave it some highly attractive interior and exterior scenes and photographed it in an equally clever manner. "The Tongues of Men" is a picture one would enjoy seeing the second time.

A NOVEL

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Copyright by The Century Co.

Alan obeyed: then he sat down before her, but turned his eyes away and gazed rather vacantly over the whole wet world. "If ever two people have known each other without words, Clem, it's you and me. Never mind the grammar. Even unbacked words are a dribbling outlet for a full heart, and my heart's as full today with things I've never said to you as the clouds are with rain."

"Nature, taken by and large, is a funny outfit, and the funniest things in it are the ones that make you want to cry. The world sees a good man, clean and straight, married to a faithful woman and laughs. Men see a pure girl give her all to a cad, and they say, 'It's always the rotters that get the pick,' and they laugh too. But down in the bottom of our hearts we know that these things are things for tears."

"Yes, Alan," said Clem as he paused. She was no longer impetuous, only attentive, with chin in hands and elbows on knees.

"You know me," went on Alan, "but there are things about me that you do not know—things below you that you have no understanding for, thank God. I don't even know how to picture them to you."

"Yes, Alan," said Clem softly.

Alan picked a bit of huckleberry bush and twisted it nervously in his hands. "First of all I've got to tell you what I thought you knew, that what there is of me is yours over and over again, and then I've got to tell you why you can't have it." A light came into Clem's eyes, trembled, flickered, and then settled to a steady flame.

"You've seen people smile—everyone has a smile of sorts," went on Alan. "Did you ever think that a smile had a body and soul? To me it has. It starts out in life like a virgin with a body to keep pure and a soul to guard unstained. There are smiles that illumine a face, that shine with essential purity, that glorify. Nobody has to tell you that they have never pandered to a ribald jest or added cruelty to denial. They are live smiles and they are rare among women and rarer among men. For one such you'll find a thousand living faces with dead smiles—smiles that have scattered their essence like rain on the just and the unjust, that have rolled in filth and wasted their substance on the second best. You'll find them flickering out in the faces of young men and at the last gasp in the faces of lost women whose eyes hold the shadows of forgotten sins."

"Well?" said Clem.

Alan sighed. "Between the lines of my words you must read for yourself. My smile is dead—I killed it long ago. Yours is alive—alive. You have kept it pure, guarded its flame and you shall hold it high like a beacon. You are ready to give all and you have all to give. I have nothing but the empty shell. I have kept nothing. I have gained the whole world—and lost it. The little strength left to the plaiders of my soul could carry me up to clutch your beacon and drag it down, but Clem—dearest of all women—I love you too much for that. You've got to trust me. The things I know that you do not know shore the duty of denial on to my shoulders. I could give you an empty shell, but I won't."

Alan had not looked at Clem. He had talked like one rehearsing a lesson, with his eyes far away in the gray world. He dropped the bit of bush, and his hands, locked about his knees, gripped each other till the knuckles and fingers showed white against the tan of his thin wrists. When he stopped speaking Clem turned curious eyes upon him. "Is that all?" she asked.

Alan sprang up and faced her. "All?"

"All?" he cried. "Isn't it enough?"

Clem rose to her feet. In her uplifted right hand she held her agate-headed riding whip.

Faced on it as she meant them to do, then, with a full, free swing, she flung it from her. The whip, weighted by the agate head, described a long curve through the air and thumped into the brush far down the mountain side. "That," Clem cried, her eyes flashing into his, "for the beacon. I kept it for you. It was too good for you; you would not take it, so there it goes." Her lips trembled and she snapped her fingers. "It is not worth that to me."

"Don't speak," said Clem; "you have said what you had to say. Now listen to me. You are blind, Alan, or worse than that, asleep. I'm not a thin-legged elf with skirts bobbing above my knees any more. You can't make me swallow my protests today with 'Clem, you mustn't this and you mustn't that.' There's one thing you've closed your eyes on long enough. I'm a woman, Alan, bone, spirit and a great deal of flesh. I love you, and you say you love me."

Alan started forward, but Clem held him off with a gesture. "What do you think I love in you? The things you have spent? The things you have thrown away? Has a woman ever fallen in love with a man because he was perfect?" Clem made a despondent gesture with both hands as though she sought words that would not come. "Some men clap a wife on to themselves," she went on, "as you clap a lid on to a hot fire. If the fire grows cold quick enough the lid cracks. Some just let the fire burn out and take the dress with it. A woman knows that there is always something left in the man she loves, and even if she did not know it, it would be the same. She would rather give all for nothing than never give at all."

Clem's voice fell into a lower key. "The things you know that I do not know? What a child you are among men. A half-witted woman is born with more knowledge than the wisest of you ever attains and the first thing she learns is that life laughs at knowledge."

Clem stopped speaking and her eyes that had wandered came back to Alan's face. She drew a quivering breath. Her face had been pale, but now the sudden color surged up over her throat and into her cheeks. She put up her hands to her forehead. "Oh," she gasped, "you have driven me too far. I am a mean thing in my own eyes as I am in yours."

At first Alan had stood stunned by the words in which she had poured out her overburdened heart, but as she went on pitilessly laying bare her subjection a flame lit up his eyes and fired his blood. Now he sprang forward and dragged her hands from her face. "Mean, Clem? Mean in my eyes?"

"My God! My God!" He cried.

Then his tongue failed him. He sank to the wet grass at her feet, took her knees in his arms and hid his hot face in her skirt. "My God, my God," he cried. "I am mean, but what there is of me has knelt to you by night and worshipped you by day. When you were little you were in my heart and you have grown up to it. When you were little there was room there for other things, but now that you have grown up you have filled it—all of it—every nook and cranny."

A tender went through Clem's body. She rested the fingers of one hand on Alan's head and tried to turn up his face. But he held it close to her knees. "If you want me, Clem, if you want me, then there must be things left—things I have never—could never give—to anyone else. But I am ashamed to pour them into your lap—I must pour them at your feet."

"No," said Clem gravely. "I do not want you to pour things at my feet."

It's got to be eye to eye or nothing, and if there's any man left in—

"Clem," broke in Alan, "there is enough man left in me if you'll only give me time. Time to groom him."

You can understand that, Clem? You know what grooming and a clean stable will do for a shaggy horse?"

Clem nodded. "How much time do you want?"

Alan hesitated. "A year," he said. "I'll make a year do it."

"You can have six months," replied Clem and added with a smile, "That's ten per cent under office estimates."

Then forgetful of hours and meals and the little things in life that do not count when human souls mount to the banquet of the gods, they sat side by side and hand in hand on a big rock and stared with unseeing eyes at the gray world. "With you beside me," said Alan, "all skies are blue and filled with the light of a single, steady star."

Clem did not answer, but in her eyes content and knowledge, tenderness and strength, pleasure and pain played with each other like the lights and dappled shadows under a swaying bough.

When Clem and Alan reached home long after the lunch hour they found the Hill aflutter with news. Alix had received a cable and had left at once for town. She had gone alone. That could mean but one thing—Gerry was at last coming back.

It was from Barbados that Gerry had cabled. Ever since he had written his short note to Alix, through long-doubting weeks at Piranhas and longer days of questioning and hesitation on board the slow freighter that was bearing him home, Gerry had been fighting himself. Only Lieber's sudden death and his burial, to which Gerry had ridden post-haste, had come in between as a solemn trace.

On the freighter he had had time enough and to spare to think. He had spent hours going over the same ground time and time again. For days he sat in his chair on the short bridge-deck, staring out to sea, making over and over the circle of his life from the time he had left home. He remembered sitting thus on the way out. He remembered the turmoil his mind had been in and the apathy that had followed, the long rest at Pernambuco, the trip down the coast and up the river, the glorious, misty morning at Piranhas. Margarita, catastrophe, awakening. What did that awakening stand for? Again he thought, if he could choose—would he wish to be back as he was before—as he was on the way out? A voice within him said "No."

In those days when once more his thoughts demanded to be seen in their relation to Alix, that steady voice within him was his only comfort. The flood at Fazenda Flores had swept away all that his hands had done, but the things that Fazenda Flores had done for him could not be swept away by any material force. They stood and feared nothing—except Alix.

Wherever his mind turned, it came back to Alix and found in her an impulse. Alix assumed more and more the portentous attributes of one unattached, sitting in judgment over his acts. His memory of her frailty, of her flowerlike detachment from the bones—the skeleton—of life, her artificiality, made her seem ludicrously incongruous in the role of judge. He could not picture her, much less estimate the sentence she would pass. His thoughts left him daily up to that impasse and left him. Then came the doubt and the question—why should he lead himself bodily to the impasse at all?

He was still fighting this point when he reached Barbados but there an incident befell which brought a new light to his mind and then a new peace to his soul.

He had gone ashore at Bridgetown simply because his whole body, perfectly attuned by three years of long hours of toil, was crying out for more exercise than the narrow decks of the freighter could afford.

When the little group of passengers reached shore, with the exception of Gerry and an old returning Barbadian, they all turned in the same direction as if by a common impulse.

The Barbadian glanced at Gerry and jerked his head at the disappearing group. "Men of the world in the big sense," he said.

"What do you mean?" asked Gerry.

"Sou," said the old Barbadian, who was very tanned and whose kindly eyes blinked through thick glasses, "when a chap tells you he's a man of the world you ask him if he ever had a drink at the ice house. You don't have to say 'in Bridgetown.' Ever have a drink at the ice house? Just like that; and if he says, 'No,' you know he meant he was a town rounder when he said he was a man of the world."

Gerry smiled and fell naturally in step with the Barbadian as he moved slowly on.

"Yes," said the old man. "It's a sure test. The man that hasn't crooked his elbow at the big, round deal table in that old, ramshackle drink-house can't say he's really traveled. Long-lost brothers and friends have met there, and when men that roam the high seas want news of some pal that's disappeared down the highway of the world they drop in at the old ice house and ask what road he took. It's halfway house to all the seven seas."

"Have you lost anyone?" asked Gerry.

"No, I'm not thirsty for a drink just now," said the Barbadian with a smile. "And you?"

"Nor I," said Gerry, laughing. "I'm out to stretch my legs."

"You can't do that here," replied the old man. "You don't know our sun. Come with me." He hailed a ramshackle victoria.

Gerry hesitated. "You must have a home you want to go to and friends to see. Don't worry about me. I'll be careful about the sun."

"Would you like some tonic on your hair?" asked the barber. "I've got something here that will positively stop it from coming out."

"I don't believe it," said the man in the chair. "The only thing that will stop my hair from coming out is a divorce."

Mother was expecting an important visitor—no less a person than a bishop. And among her other preparations she was anxiously instructing the children how to behave.

"Now, dears," she said, as a last warning, "I want you to keep very quiet and good while the bishop is here, and not say or do anything which might make me feel ashamed."

Little four-year-old Mary looked up at her with tears in her star-like eyes.

Little four-year-old Mary looked up at her with tears in her star-like eyes.

"Oh, mother," she said, regretfully, "mayn't we even ask him to christen the new kittens?"

GAZETTE BOWLERS OPEN TOURNAMENT AT MILLER ALLEYS

Gazette Five Open Tournament Last Night and Hits a Score of 2239—

Other Match Games.

Captain Druettell of the Gazette five rolled the first ball down the alley last night at Miller's in the opening of the first annual Southern Wisconsin Bowling tournament. Druettell's first ball resulted in a split which is looked upon as a good omen—the tournament should be a big one and the scores high.

Failure to get concerted action cost ground for the team and they finished with a final score of 2239, which puts them in first place—for one night at least. Tonight the Twilight Club, captained by Jacob Stern will take the floor at seven o'clock.

Friday at one o'clock will see the Monroe Tigers and the Wilkowski High Lites from Watertown in action. These teams will keep the alleys until seven o'clock, rolling all their events, fives, singles and doubles. The Watertown team should roll a high score as in the tournament held at Watertown they hit a score of 2970. The time limit for entries has been extended to March 20.

In the K. C. League last night the Calverts took the match by over fifty pins when they had the lead in every event. The Hennepins and the DeLeons rolled a tight game which resulted in a victory for the DeLeons by about ten pins.

At the West Side alleys the Carpenters and the Painters clashed and fought a fair game. The Carpenters had the lead in the last end. Following are the scores and lineups:

FAST GAMES ARE PLAYED AT COLLEGE TOURNAMENT

Milton, Wis., March 15.—The beginning of the basketball tournament at Milton was a fast and clean game between Sun Prairie and Milton Jct., which the latter was victorious by a margin of 23 to 12.

This was followed by perhaps the best game of the entire tournament, a contest between Neilsville and Harland. This game was exceptional, so fast that the referee had hard work in detecting the fouls. Neilsville's two best men were distinguished on fouls and that fact gave the Harland team a margin of two points, 23 to 21.

The first game of the evening was staged at 7:30 between Stoughton and Port Atkinson. Although somewhat one-sided the game was lively and interesting. Stoughton winning, 26 to 10. Fast work was displayed by several Stoughton men.

The second and last game of the evening was between Milton and Monello, the latter winning by a score of 20 to 13. This was the slowest and most uninteresting game of the day. The lack of speed of Milton being due to sickness of their best guard.

HIGHS TO FINISH SCHEDULE SATURDAY

Blue and White Tossers Will Play Last Game of Season at Madison on Saturday Night.

Janesville high school will close their basketball season on Saturday night in a game at Madison with the Capital City high school five. After three days of hard work at Whitewater last week, Coach Keck did not send his men through many stiff drills during the first part of this week. Most of the players seem to be none the worse for the hard knocks received at the tournament and the regular line-up will probably be used in the game Saturday night.

A very hard struggle is expected as the Madison five is one of the strongest teams in this section of the state. In a game with the team on January twenty-first the J. H. S. five were defeated by a score of fifteen to ten. This was early in the season and since then the locals have improved much in their team work and basket shooting.

Reports from Madison indicate that their five expect an easy victory to close their basketball season with.

The church games scheduled to be played on Friday night of this week will be between the St. Patricks and the Congregationals and the Baptists vs. the Methodists. Both these games will be very important as they will help decide the champions of the league. The first one, between the Catholics and the Congregationalists, has not been defeated this season and the Congregationalists are the only bunch that can possibly hold that little team of basketball artists.

The Baptists are working hard to get in shape for the Methodists. This will be a battle royal as the rivalry is keen between these fives.

GOTCH AND STECHER REVIVING WRESTLING

Chicago Trying to Land Coveted Match Between Champion and New Mat Sensation.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Chicago, March 16.—Wrestling fans in this city are beginning to discuss the relative merits of Gotch and Stecher, whose careers seem to be drawing them toward a match that should leave one or the other a clear title to the world's highest honors in the mat game. Bids already have been made for the match, and it is believed here that it will be held on some popular holiday and in some place within easy reach of the thousands of rooters who will back Gotch and the Nebaskans who will be ready with cheers and coin to support Stecher.

Fans conceded the great advantage of Gotch to Stecher, who is in his early twenties while Gotch is expected to be near forty. Again they thought advantage to Stecher, in his having continually kept in training within the last few years, while Gotch, though said to have worked hard on his farm, has had little of real wrestling practice. Gotch, however, who is now on the Coast, has been making more return to the mat and is wrestling often as an attraction for the circus with which he is traveling.

On Gotch's side there is the famous head piece that won him the championship battle over Stecher, and his far greater experience about the ropes. The methods of the men are different. Stecher's forte is the scissors hold, which, though known to catch-as-catch-can wrestlers from time immemorial, has, it is said, never been used so effectively as by the Nebaskan. With it, he has conquered all his prominent opponents, and except for one battle, he has disposed of them so rapidly that he apparently is about in a class by himself. His legs are marvelously strong it is declared by his trainers, and though they represent his greatest asset in offensive work, in case of a match with Gotch their strength would prove a marvelous defense.

For Gotch's chief reliance is his famous toe. Since he puts his terrific grip to work at twisting a rival's leg, the match was generally considered finished. Stecher's friends believe the great power of his lower limbs will prove an effective foil to the tow.

State rivalry is expected to make the match a great drawing card. Both men have hosts of admirers.

MUNICIPAL UMPIRE SCHOOL TRIED OUT IN OMAHA, NEB.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Omaha, March 16.—Beginning March 10 and continuing until April 16, the new municipal umpires school will give instruction to all young men who may wish to perfect themselves in the rules of baseball with a view to presiding over amateur games played on the dozen or more municipal diamonds during the coming season. George Clarke, a former Western league umpire, is chief supervisor of baseball. His corps of instructors will include Jack Haskell, former American and Western league umpire, Jack Van Syckle, former Federal and Western league umpire, W. A. Bourke, president of the Omaha Western league club, Marty Krug, manager of the Omaha club, and William Earle, a former big league catcher.

It is the intention of the city commission to encourage amateur baseball by furnishing grounds and umpires for the use of all regularly organized clubs. It is expected that the Omaha Amateur Baseball association will join with the city in paying the umpires for their work.

CINCINNATI REDS TRY RAW MEAT DIET TO GET TOUGH IN TRAINING

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Cincinnati, March 16.—Word comes up from Shreveport where the Reds are doing their spring training that a diet of raw meat has been adopted by several husky athletes. Bill Rodgers, the second baseman, is credited with introducing the idea and Moll, recently under a contract to the Pirates, is quoted as being decidedly worried openly admitting that he does not know the effect raw meat is liable to have upon a trained athlete.

Manager Jack Hendricks RECOVERS FROM OPERATION.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Indianapolis, March 16.—Manager Hendricks, of the Indianapolis American Association baseball club, who recently underwent a minor operation, is able to get about again, and is reported to be in good shape to accompany his team when it starts for Albany, Ga., on March 20 for its spring training.

The Pirates have decided not to take on Pitcher Al Schacht of the former Harrisburg team of the International League. Manager Callahan found he had a sorry pitcher already and he considered that enough.

Bernard Lee, third baseman and captain of the Tufts College team, will get a tryout with the Braves at Miami this spring. He is noted as a hard hitter in college circles and is already a contender for the title of Smith out of his job.

Eddie Plank having failed to win this point that he should be declared a free agent, decided to make the best of it by signing up with the St. Louis Browns, and so it was that Fielder Jones has another southpaw to shoot against Detroit.

With the Indians acquiring Chick Gandil, Jay Kerk is expected to make another trip to the minors along the path he has worn in the past five or six years. Jay has been up and down enough times to know the route with his eyes shut.

Ivan Howard dropped in from California to St. Louis, expecting to go to camp with the Browns just in time to learn that he had been transferred to the Cleveland Indians. The change did not seem to disturb him. He is too wise a ball player for that.

Tyrus Cobb is at the head of a company which is building an apartment house in Augusta, Ga., at a cost of $75,000. If the real estate venture is successful as hoped it will be enlarged and Cobb's company will own a quarter of a million in similar buildings in Augusta.

Lee Fohl of the Indians doesn't say much, but when he does it is to the point. He declined to take an expedition when offered him. His team, led by Fohl, though making a bad showing, pulled out a victory, and he does not mean to have any anarchists or Cleveland has had enough of that.

The Brooklyn club has consented to cancel the exhibition games with the Athletics, scheduled at Ebbets Field for April 10 and 11, at the request of Manager Mack, who has so deemed it advisable to give the final inspection on his home grounds on these days.

Although boxing is being scorned by the college men, wrestling is fast gaining in popularity in both the middle west and the east. In the east there are two associations, the old Intercollegiate Association and the newly organized New England Association, the latter embracing Harvard and Yale, together with several small colleges. Yale, whose team was voted out of the Intercollegiate Association several years ago, because of a difference over eligibility rules, has been most active in forming the New England Association.

Irvin Cobb, the war correspondent, after dinner speaker and baseball fan, tells a story on himself. Shortly after he interviewed Lord Kitchener, would last two years more, Cobb returned home. One day he overheard two southern darlings on a street car discussing the war. "This war is going to last two years more," said one positively. "Shucks, man, how do you know that?" asked the other. "I guess I know it," said the first. "Didn't I read in the newspapers the other day where the King of Europe told Ty Cobb it would last two years more?"

Charlie Ebbets, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers, anticipates a long life—extremely long life, in fact. Charles recently said: "I will not quit baseball until after the world's championship banner floats proudly above Ebbets' field."

That President Weeghman of the Cubs seriously made an offer of Roger Bresnahan to the New York Yankees has been confirmed and it is said that Manager Bill Donovan of the Yanks actually considers it. The proposition of Weeghman, it is said, is to split the salary that Roger's contract calls for.

Fred Clarke, former manager of the Pittsburgh team, who resigned at the end of last season, finds it hard to stay away from the game. Just as he saw how his old team looks, he intends to run down to Hot Springs, Ark., to see the Pirates in action once more and in the hope that Jimmy Callahan, his successor, has picked up some likely looking youngsters. It has never been an easy matter for a fellow who has spent a greater part of his life in baseball to absolutely break away from the game, and Clarke is now having this experience.

William E. Irwin, a young catcher, who had played in various minor leagues and was taken south by the Phillies a year ago to assist in working out pitchers, was killed in a saloon row in Philadelphia February 8. He fell through a window, his jugular vein was severed and he bled to death.

Phil Douglas, in the matter of natural ability one of the best pitchers identified with the game at the present time, is absolutely worthless because of his habits. Douglas was with Cincinnati, Brooklyn and Chicago last season and lost out in every instance because he refused to take care of himself. The other day when he reported to Manager Joe Tinker at Tampa he is said to have been under the influence of drink and to have remained in that condition for three days. Tinker chased him out of the camp and at once made arrangements to have Douglas join the St. Paul club of the American Association.

Speaking of Cobb's ineffective batting against Weismann, the Hamilton (O.) boy with the Browns, don't overlook the fact that the Peach's hitting average against Gallia, another pitcher of the Washington team, was exactly .071 in 1915.

Frank Moran may have made a serious mistake in his training. Instead of taking things easy while Willard was not hurrying, he went through a strenuous course of training at Saratoga, and as a result he now is believed to have gone astray and will have to let up in his hard work. Willard seems to have the right idea about conditioning himself. He is gradually increasing the pace of his preliminary work as the time for the battle draws near, and even those critics who argued that he was too fat to be able to get in the good little now are realizing that the champion is gradually getting himself ready for the fight of his life.

Joe Tinker will have a lot of players to dispose of about the time his training season is over. There are a lot of youngsters down with the Cubs in Tampa who are not apt to hold their own, and Tinker will have to get rid of them before the salary season starts, for the expenses of the Cubs already are greater than those of most teams in the league. The Cubs have had to pay some of their men big salaries because they were tied up to the club when the Peds merged with it. The members of the club who will be retained are not getting very fat salaries, it is understood.

As a training camp novelty Manager Tinker of the Cubs has offered a purse of $100 to go to the winner of the series between the Regulars and Colts. Frank Schulte, the veteran outfielder, and George Zabel, the pitcher, had good alibis when they arrived at the training camp at Tampa, and Joe, who intended to fine them each $100, relented.

Joe Canillon's American Association champions are beginning to report at Hickman, Ky., where they will do their training. Reports from the camp are that the weather is ideal. Canillon will again have a lot of former Nationals on his line-up. Acosta has joined him this spring and Massey, Morley, Jennings, Joe Engel, Cashion, Williams, Holland, Wally Smith and Dave Altizer, together with Catchers Tyree and Owens, formerly of the Peds; Dickson, a Pittsburghed Peder, and Menosky, an outfielder from the same club, from which also came Burk, another pitcher, virtually make up Canillon's team, though he will have several unknowns to report for training.

TAFT TELLS OF PLAN FOR PEACE LEAGUE

powers to sign an international agreement and the signatories were to be bound to four plans:

(1) All justiciable questions arising between members of the league shall be submitted to a court of arbitration. (2) All non-justiciable questions shall be submitted to a commission of conciliation to hear the arguments and to recommend a course of settlement. (3) Any member of the league that shall declare war before submitting its case of difficulty to the court or the commission of conciliation, shall incur the united opposition of the members of the league. Against such recalcitrants we propose to use, first, such economic means as we have within our power such as the boycott, the shutting off of all trade relations, the refusal to import, and second, if necessary to join together in the use of our armies and navies.

(4) An international congress of all the members shall enlarge and render definite the rules of international law, which is that body of rules that govern the proper conduct of nations toward each other.

Need to Clarify Laws.

In order for a rule of international law to become established it must receive the acquiescence of all nations. There may be some doubt as to the rule, whether some certain nation has accepted it or not, and if we have an international law, we must look into and clarify the situation, suggest new rules and regulations, we will have gained much. We will have to look often to the international court for interpretation and we will have some judge-made law. I am not skeptical about judge-made law because, however, encyclopedic our legislatures may be they are bound to overlook some thing which it will remain for the courts to determine. But there will be an important function for the international congress to perform in this regard of nations united for the enforcement of international peace.

First let us consider those justiciable questions, questions which can be settled in law and equity, which are to be referred to a court of arbitration. What precedents have we in international law? We can go back as far as the Articles of Confederation and find that provision was made for the settlement of disputes between the states, but it was not used. It was usually independent of one from the other to lodge any complaint which it might have against another state with the continental congress, which in turn submitted it to a court for final adjustment and arbitration. There were a number of cases brought up in this manner, but only one of them was finally presented to the court. That was the case of Connecticut against the state of Pennsylvania in regard to the western reserve. Connecticut contended that her land grants placed the northern part of Pennsylvania within Connecticut boundary, and the question of western reserve, the decision being given without a statement of the reasons for it.

Inter-State Arbitration.

Later in our federal constitution provision was made, which was substantially a provision for arbitration, that controversies between states should be settled by the supreme court. We are accustomed to think of such differences of opinion as involving mere corporations, but a number of fact cases present the same situation as if each state was an independent nation. Taft reviewed several cases which emphasized that point. He briefly the case of Kansas against Colorado in which the difficulty at issue was whether Colorado was taking more than its share of the water of the Arkansas river for irrigation purposes. Congress could not legislate on the matter and neither could Kansas. It was a matter for the supreme court to decide which was in the right. The ruling was to the effect that Colorado was not taking more than her share. In the Chicago drainage canal case the citizens of Mississippi contended that the state material increased the spread of typhoid in Mississippi. It was an issue upon which two independent states might go to war. It was settled in the supreme court by arbitration, the burden being placed upon Mississippi to show how it could be determined which typhoid germs were from Chicago and which were not, the decision being in favor of Illinois.

But you say that it is not a precedent because the federal government is in and if there is any danger of a precedent, it is taken by the superior power to suppress it. I would refer to the experience of the United States in a number of notable cases with outside governments. Take, for example, our relations with Canada, the dependency of Great Britain, which lies our neighbor to the north.

Experiences With Canada. Judge Taft then called the attention of the country to the arbitration history of this country with Great Britain with reference to Canada, beginning with the Jay treaty of 1794 and continuing through the settlement of the Alabama claims and the fishermen's controversy. In the year of 1812, he pointed out the United States contended for sailors' rights and England for the right of search, it was rather an indifferent war, he said, with a few brilliant naval duels fought by the United States, but nothing to be proud of in land fighting. Both sides became tired after several years and the treaty of Ghent was signed a hundred years ago, since when there has been no more warfare with our neighbor across the seas.

And so we got into the habit of arbitrating the differences which came up between ourselves and Canada, continued Mr. Taft. "We were threatened with a serious controversy over our northeastern boundary, but Lord Ashburton and Webster got together and patched it up. Then we faced a bad tangle in the northwest and we came near going to war over the slogan 'Fifty-Four Forty or Fight.' We had jingos in those days just as we have today, but good judgment prevailed and we agreed to advance our boundary no farther than the forty-ninth parallel."

Referring to the Alabama claims the speaker told of the Geneva arbitration conference which decided in favor of the United States with a verdict for damages of $15,000,000. Then Great Britain charged that American fishermen were encroaching on Canadian waters and when submitted to arbitration the decision was against us and we were required to pay $5,000,000. Of course there were those who objected to these decisions," continued Judge Taft. "In England some prominent men said that the Alabama award was an outrage and could not be paid without violating England's honor. Fishermen on our northeast coast raised a great cry over the award to Great Britain, but both were paid nevertheless. It reminds me of the case of a man may take when he is beaten in a lawsuit. He may take an appeal or he may go down to the corner grocery and damn the court. All of which goes to prove the fact that if you submit a question to arbitration you must be willing to abide by the decision, whether it be for you or against you."

Get Arbitration Habit.

"Since we got into the habit of arbitration with Canada, it is not entirely possible to get into the habit of arbitration with other countries and for other countries to get into the habit of arbitration with each other. We have had further indication of the part which arbitration may take in the settlement of international affairs. I refer to The Hague tribunal. The nations agreed to arbitration, they signed an agreement for an international court to which they might come to have their matters settled. It is then a fair stretch of the imagination in view of history to believe that we can adopt arbitration as a means of settlement for non-justiciable controversies."

Then for the third plan, in case a nation a member of the league, persists in resorting to war, the first proposal is arbitration, which may result in avoiding war in allowing the nations to cool. The plan is to let the nations cool, and let the people think of what they are going into. But if war must come, then the other nations of the league are bound to unite against the warlike one and employ economic tactics both exports and imports, boycott on its commerce completely. Then if that fails, there must be a resort to the use of the united armies and navies of the league to prevent the use of force is held up to the recalcitrant.

"But there are people who object to force. I have respect for the pacifists, but their assumption for the abandonment of armaments is based upon a better opinion of their fellow man than they are really entitled to. As long as nations are made up of men they will be no better than the average man who in a moment of passion may not be dependent upon them. There are some nations who are not so dependable as others, just as there are men who are less dependable. They are more greedy, more grasping and it is our duty to remove temptations from them, to give sanction to the threat of the sheriff to use force in order to restrain them."

Force Versus Anarchists. "We cannot agree with those theoretical anarchists who believe that if the restraint of law is removed from society then every person will know that far, although it is entirely certain that we haven't done this for our children. We live in a luxurious age and we are in the habit of delegating the disciplining of our children to others. We put the burden on the school teacher and home training is forgotten."

"What is proposed is to add to the sanction of restraint, the sanction of knowledge that if they do not stand to the treaties they will have the entire body of the league against them." Judge Taft then took up a consideration of some of the objections to the plan which are heard in the United States. One was that it would be unconstitutional because it would take from congress the right to declare war. Judge Taft denied that such was the case, and said that the constitution will lay with congress to decide whether there shall be break or not, whether this nation wishes to take upon itself the consequences of facing every other nation of the league.

Then the objection is made that it would be a departure from the doctrine laid down by Washington against the making of entangling alliances. It was in discussion of this phase of the situation that Judge Taft spoke of the Philippines and made known his opposition to the proposal to turn them loose within four years. Coming from a man who is acquainted with Philippine affairs, as is Judge Taft, probably better informed than any other one American, his utterance, brief as it was, carried much weight.

"It has been proposed," he said, "to break our obligations with the Philippines, and a bill terminating United States control within four years has already been introduced in congress. I have not the time, and second because I did not fear that with my feelings on the question I might not be able to state myself to parliamentary language."

Taft then went on to show the extent of the United States' international relations. He referred to the vast territory stretching from one ocean to the other, Alaska, in the Arctic Circle, Hawaii and the Philippines in the Pacific, the latter 7,000 miles from the Pacific coast, bringing us in touch with the problem of Japan and China; the Panama canal to Porto Rico and Cuba in the West Indies, and then the Monroe doctrine, "which like the poor we always have with us," valuable as it is. "And then," said Taft, "we have Mexico, the international difficulties, and if we have intervened in Mexico, as we certainly have in some measure, European nations when they are released of their own war troubles will hold the United States more or less responsible for the condition of affairs now existing in Mexico."

Must Defend Neutral Rights.

"We are continually threatened with being drawn into the war in Europe, secure as we felt at the outbreak. Both sides have violated the rights of neutrals. We have preserved our duties as neutrals, but under the conditions of war it has been possible for us to furnish goods to but one of the belligerents, which could not help but result in friction. Doesn't it seem as if we are as near being drawn into war if we remained out of an international agreement such as proposed as we would if we were parties to it? We have a good deal of hay out that is in danger of getting wet in the world storm. We have a good many good things that others want. If one of the other belligerent in Europe is decisively victorious, had we not better be in a position to remove temptation from him in our own interests?"

"Our position while this conflict is going on is giving us more and more power. Ought we not to risk something and help along the cause of the neutrals, nations who ought not to be subjected to such degradations of their rights without being consulted in any way? Should we allow Europe, a corner of Europe, rather, bring about a world of statism and the retrogression of civilization without incurring some obligation to counteract it and insisting upon our own rights?"

LONDON'S FAMOUS BEGGARS DISAPPEARING FROM STREETS

London, March 16.—Almost complete disappearance of the ragged but picturesque street vendors and other itinerant frequenters of London's thoroughfares is one of the notable changes brought about by a year and a half of war.

Before hostilities began the curb stones of the principal streets were lined from morning to night by hawking of pirated copies of popular songs, cheap toy sellers and match vendors, while at every few yards the passerby was accosted by a man or woman carrying a fruit basket or a tray laden with chocolates and other candies. Now these are gone and pedestrians are grateful for the relief from constant appeals to buy. At the same time the police are pleased to be freed from the continuous duty of keeping the ragged army within the limits of the city ordinance.

Other characters of London's streets whose disappearance, on the contrary, is regretted are the red-coated shoe-blacks formerly seen on every street corner and around the railroad stations. The disagreeable London mud, oozing up in case of wet weather, owing to the clayey composition of the subsoil, makes these men's absence noticeable, and also that of the crossing sweepers who sweep the narrow pathways through the mud and whose services were much appreciated by the women.

The push-cart men or "coster-mongers" with their little donkey barrows full of cheap vegetables which they took offered for sale in the suburban districts away from the shopping centers have gone—many of them to serve in the army.

Does It Run On Kerosene?

THE most important feature of a farm power engine today is the fuel it uses. That, more than anything else, determines its usefulness and economy.

At present prices of gasoline and kerosene, you could not afford to accept a gasoline engine as a gift, if you had to use it.

You could better afford to pay a big premium for a Mogul kerosene engine.

See the Mogul work on kerosene. Ask your dealer to show you the difference in fuel cost between a Mogul in any size from 1 to 50-H. P., and a gasoline engine of the same size. The figures will surprise you.

Rough Riders.

ANYONE who has the slightest knowledge of English history as far as it deals with wars with other countries knows what an important part the Irish took in those struggles, not only as to the rank and file which bore the brunt of the fight but also as to the officers whose tactics and skill directed the forces against the enemy. The heroism of the Sons of the Emerald Isle is proverbial, and this has been illustrated on many battle fields, whether displayed in loyalty to Great Britain or in defense of the rights of the land of their adoption. Upon England's Honor Roll Ireland holds a prominent place and perhaps the very first rank.

When we consider that from the surrender of Limerick until the end of the French Revolution three-quarters of a million of adults of Irish birth served in the armies and navies of Europe alone we can form some estimate of the military ability of this race. History is filled with accounts of their valor and of their never-saying-spirit. When on the field or on long marches their steadiness is unsurpassed, for they never waver under fire.

Records of their courage have filled volumes. Even as far back as 1595 we find Hugh O'Neill battling for Ireland—fighting for the "auld sod" with a vigor unequalled in history. In 1614 another O'Neill came into fame. He was renowned for his remarkable skill in military tactics, many of which are still in use.

Count Peter Lacy, Daniel O'Mahony and Chevalier Wogan, all Irishmen, occupy niches in the Hall of Fame for fighters, and one may find glowing accounts of their heroic work in Irish history.

The Battle of Fontenoy, the most decisive battle fought in Europe during the eighteenth century, was one in which the bravery of the Irish troops in the service of France was displayed with the greatest lustre for themselves, the greatest advantage to the country that had given them a home—and to a certain extent, fame and honor.

The eighteenth century brought out the fighting qualities of many Irishmen. Lieutenant-General Charles O'Brien, Viscount Clare, Captain Carrow and our own General Richard Montgomery, the pro-martyr of the American Revolution who fell at Quebec.

Irish-American Heroes.

Anthony Wayne, too, was an Irishman. He was nicknamed "Mad" Anthony Wayne, from the fact that it was thought that no sane man would attempt the storming of Stony Point, a post on the Hudson river, near

LLOYD.

King's Ferry. Wayne carried the day and his successful daring has made his name dear to every American.

General John Stark, the hero of Bennington, was an Irishman of few words, but of decisive action and the author of the famous words so well known to every school boy: "My boys, you see those Redcoats yonder? They must fall into our hands in fifteen minutes or Molly Stark will be a widow!" It is needless to say that Mrs. Stark did not become a widow.

It has been calculated by the best authorities that the Irish element formed at least one-third of the officers and privates who took part in the great struggle from 1775 to 1782.

Father of Our Navy.

The Father of our Navy was also an Irishman—Commodore John Barry, a native of the County Wexford. He came from a race of sailors and at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War was in command of the finest packet ship which sailed across the Atlantic to and from American shores. He had met Washington some years before and the latter admired the bluff sailor and kept him in mind. Toward the end of 1775, when Congress took measures toward forming a navy, the project was placed in the hands of Barry at once set up a system of naval guerrilla warfare which fairly drove the British captains to distraction, for by this method his little armed boats were able to capture many of the English supply ships.

Major Michael Corcoran, who came from Ireland at the outbreak of the Civil War, took an active part in the Battle of Bull Run, and while the Union troops were defeated in this battle, Corcoran fought valiantly, leading many of the charges. Colonel James McMahon and General Matthew Murphy also served in the Civil War with distinction. Thousands of Irishmen served in the ranks and died for the preservation of the American Union.

England's Irish Heroes.

Over in England the majority of their military heroes for the past two centuries at least have been Irishmen or men with a strain of Irish blood. During the Peninsular War two-thirds of the English army are said to have been Irish, and in 1810 a member of Parliament asserted that within his own knowledge out of a regiment of men then stationed in the south of England eight hundred and sixty of the one thousand were Irish.

The great Wellington was Irish, as was Ross, Gough and Napier. The late Lord Roberts, although born in India, had a strain of Irish blood in his veins. Sir John French, too, boasts of Irish ancestry.

Lord Kitchener, Great Britain's greatest military man of the present war, is Irish and was born near Ballylongford, Kerry. His military record up to the present war has been one long list of victories for England. His work in the Sudan campaign and his final rout of the Khalifa at Omdurman in 1898 won back the Sudan for Egypt and made him a peer. He was Chief of Staff and Commander-in-Chief during the Boer War and for a time Commander-in-Chief in India. Today his word is law in British military affairs despite the reports that he is to be deposed.

Ireland in the Present War.

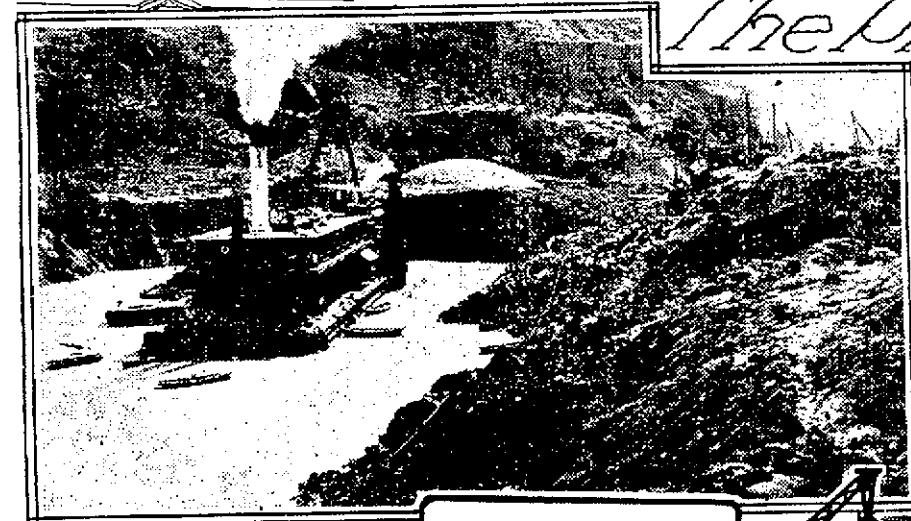

A great deal has been written about the disloyalty of the Irish toward England during the present war. Much of this is mere talk, and were it not for the rigid censorship the world would be ringing with the bravery of the Irish soldier. To be sure, the Irish have not yet responded to the call of recruits with as much alacrity as was expected, but neither have the English, yet nevertheless Ireland is doing her part, and not very long ago Sergeant—now Lieutenant O'Leary, a young Irishman, was given a Victoria Cross for taking a German position practically single-handed. Today this young officer is a hero both in England and Ireland, and recently he has been in Dublin assisting in recruiting. The same gallant charges as of old are being made by the Irish soldiers and not long ago the English papers were filled with stories of the Irish Guards when they joined the French infantry in carrying out an order to clear the enemy's trenches near Ypres. This order was carried out during a perfect rain of shrapnel, but the Irish never wavered and this particular trench was soon cleared.

The devotion of the Irish soldier to his comrades is one of the really beautiful things of the war. A story illustrating this is told by one of the correspondents who recently returned to England. It seems that an Irish Dragoon carried a wounded comrade on his back for nearly a mile to an abandoned farm house. There they were discovered by the Germans, who at once made an attempt to capture them. In spite of the odds against them, the Irishman refused to surrender, and their defense was so vigorous that the Germans brought up a machine gun. Rather than see the house that had sheltered them demolished they rushed out in the hope of capturing the gun, but were killed as they reached the door. "They did not surrender, they fought to the last," said the Irishman who was telling the story. "You will notice that the Dragoon did not desert his comrade," he continued.

The men of St. Patrick's Land have such a long list of heroic acts to their credit when fighting for Great Britain that it has come to be an old saying: "He that England would win Must with Ireland first begin."

The Problem of Slides at the CANAL

Showing the Cut Entirely Closed—A Fifteen Yard
Dipper at Work

How the Freakish Sliding of Mud and Rocks Is Keeping Uncle Sam Out of Tolls, and How Gen- eral Goethals Expects To Conquer Them for All Time.

Copyright, 1916, by The International Syndicate.

THE problems met and solved during the construction of the Panama Canal make it the greatest engineering undertaking the world has ever known. The building of the big Gatun dam and spillway, the immense amount of concrete used in the lock construction, the remarkable clearing up of the Canal Zone and the freeing it of disease and the fact that the work was practically carried out without strikes or other labor troubles, have kept the Canal constantly before the public eye. When water was admitted to the Cut on October 10, 1913, it was believed that a little dredging of the Cucaracha slide would complete the great waterway. On August 3, 1914, the first ship passed through the entire canal. Workmen were sent home for business, but Nature had not quite given in to man and the slides resumed their activity, but the engineers

Solving the Problem of Slides at the Canal

continued to keep the Cut open from time to time and vessels passed to and fro.

Old Cucaracha.

Then the Cucaracha, the most famous of all slides, woke up, and one night it rolled tons of earth into the Cut while an old offender from the other side sent rocks and mud down to meet it, and in the short space of twenty-four hours these two slides spoiled the labor of thousands of men as easily as a boy might tear up a bird's nest. Ships were held outside for weeks and the slides got on everybody's nerves from the engineers to the tourists who sat on the hot decks of the steamers fussing and in the Center of Culebra

now known as Gaillard Cut fuming over their ill luck. Finally a channel was made and the smaller vessels passed through. Then the slides came again and not only closed the channel but formed an island of mud as well.

When the United States took charge of the canal project many engineers declared that the work in Culebra Cut (now known as Gaillard Cut)—named in honor of the man who gave his life for the work) was merely a matter of the taking out of so much material and the easiest part of the task. But they evidently knew little about the soil of the Isthmus for the Cut not only proved to be the most difficult but the most expensive to make, for while everything else has been accomplished long ago the men of the Cut are still fighting slides.

Shape of Cut.

The continental ridge at Panama is only a few hundred feet in height and nine or ten miles in width. A V-shaped cut was made through this ridge and the canal located at the bottom of the V. This, of course, makes a high slope on each side and a certain amount of slipping of the earth must be expected, for according to an engineer who recently visited the Canal, "A mass on the slope loses its frictional grip on the underlying material and slips—not necessarily with rapidity—on and down under the influence of gravitation. But 'on and down' bring it to the Canal itself." He also adds—"It may be confidently expected that in the course of time everything will have slipped and slid that is going to slide, so that eventually the trouble will cure itself." Just in many years it will take to cure itself without the aid of the engineers he does not say. As the famous Cucaracha slide has been active since 1834, when it gave the French considerable trouble, the curing itself would likely be a long drawn out affair. However, General Goethals is assisting in the cure, and his latest reports give a hopeful account of the patient's progress. The angle of repose seems to be the cure, and reaching this with the earth is like waiting for the crisis in a fever case—a little uncertain.

Kinds of Slides.

The slides at Panama are of several varieties and their freakish propensities have sorely tried the patience of the engineers. Excessive rains pour down for three months every year and so thoroughly do they saturate the earth that the wind and sun of three months are not sufficient to dry out the ground water. Because of the great depth of the cutting subsurface drainage cannot reach the ground water sufficiently deep to be effective even if the immense cost involved should warrant such a procedure. It was suggested by someone that artificial heat applied through pipes might be used but General Goethals refused to consider this as he declared that the relief would be only temporary.

Planting grass and other vegetation on the slopes was suggested as a method of preventing slides, but when the heavy rains come, this vegetation is washed into the Canal—in fact, big trees which have been standing on the banks for years have come down with the slides, remaining in an upright position during the movement. Piling was also tried but with little success.

Curious breaks have occurred such as at Zion Hill, where several tons of earth suddenly broke away from the side of the hill and slid down, forming a miniature sugar loaf mountain. This gradually broke up and slipped into the Canal. A vast amount of earth as this falling on the soft material below causes a "humping up"; that is, the lower earth being squeezed out below is pushed up and in one place this kind of earth formed an island in the Cut. At other places the broken up condition of the rocks and earth precludes the use of a steam shovel.

the Barrier Formed Across the Cut

It is hoped to finally cure the slides by digging back farther and in terraced fashion. The physical character of the Culebra beds, consisting as they do of alternating layers of sandstone and shale, is peculiarly favorable to landslides, and here again the angle of repose must be reached before the earth will remain at rest. Some of the sandstone and shale in the Cut when exposed to air disintegrate but harden when constantly kept wet. Where this disintegration occurs grasses and other vegetable growths will spring up and expand rapidly and hold together well but sometimes even this earth slips down the slides. Suggestions that a concrete retaining wall be built after the earth had been removed to a certain grade were made but this plan, too, was rejected by the engineers.

Experiments were tried with cement covering to the banks by the cement gun and by concrete held in place by rods embedded in the rocks, but as both proved worthless the idea was abandoned.

General Goethals's Remedy.

According to General Goethals latest report the slides which are now giving trouble are directly opposite each other and are about twenty-two hundred feet in length. The banks are three hundred to three hundred and fifty feet above sea level on the east and extend up to four hundred and eighty feet above sea level on the west. The areas of territory affected on the east side covers eighty-one acres and on the west side a little more than seventy-eight acres. This is now being removed by dredges and steam shovels. As to the cause of these slides, General Goethals in his report writes as follows:

"It is certain that the troubles are due to the failure of underlying strata, because these were unable to bear the weight that the banks brought upon them. Under the circumstances it is difficult to understand the impression that has gained credence in some quarters that a sea level canal would have avoided the difficulties encountered, since the cutting would have been through the same material, but at least eighty feet deeper.

"It is also certain that nothing can stop the movements now in progress until the angle of repose is reached for the materials under the conditions that exist, and that this can be reached only by removing the excess amount of material. If experience counts for anything, then that gained in the handling of the slides and the breaks that have occurred along the line of the canal leaves no doubt that the means adopted and now in use will effect a cure in the slides that now close the canal; furthermore, that when cured no further troubles need be anticipated from slides in this locality."

500 Brought to Auction Sale by Gazette Advertising

A good auctioneer can make a successful sale if he has a big crowd. He does his duty whether the crowd is there or not.

It is the owner's duty to get the crowd and the following letter, tells how Mr. Davis secured his crowd:

JUSTICE MARSHALL
ON FIRST VACATIONStretch of Twenty-five Years of Work
Broken By Supreme Court

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, Wis., March 16.—Justice R. D. Marshall of the supreme court is still absent on a vacation, the first he has taken in twenty-five years. Three weeks ago the judge left for the south saying that he would be gone for a month or more. The other judges predicted at the time that Justice Marshall could not stay away from work ten days. He is still absent. Justice Timlin is also absent, owing to ill health. Only one opinion was announced for him at this assignment and there is grave doubt here as to whether he will return to the court. His term does not expire until next January and the candidates for that seat elected this April does not accept the official duties until that time. The five candidates for the position have already filed their papers. They are: Judge E. B. Belden, Racine; Walter D. Corrigan, Milwaukee; C. A. Fowler, Fond du Lac; P. C. Eschweiler, Milwaukee; and W. J. Turner, Milwaukee.

HOME GARDENING WILL BE USED IN GERMANY TO INCREASE THE SUPPLIES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Berlin, March 16.—Everything indicates that the great home gardening campaign of 1915 is to be duplicated this year, but on an even more extensive scale. Seedmen report that people began to buy garden seeds with a rush in January, and the buying is now proceeding at a rate never before known. The great dealers at Erfurt, where the seed industry has its center, are answering mail orders with printed postcards begging customers to be patient till they can fill the orders. The stores are being taken (that seeds be bought only for home purposes). An American in Berlin, the owner of a small garden, ordered seed potatoes from Erfurt, and was surprised a week later to receive from a dealer a blank form on which the police were to certify to the fact that he owned a garden and was therefore entitled to buy seed potatoes. Otherwise he might have eaten seed potatoes that cost threefold more than ordinary ones.

The Imperial government, which has taken no action last year for the encouragement of vegetable growing, has now established a special bureau at Berlin for that purpose. It has appointed a horticultural expert to take charge of it and to inaugurate and conduct a country-wide campaign for the increase of vegetable production. His plan of operations embraces practical measures of help, besides mere propaganda. All available lands about cities, factory sites, and elsewhere will be put into vegetables and properly cultivated. The superintendent of gardening is communicating with the various economic war organizations to induce them to look after supplies of manure for the armies of volunteer gardeners thus to be called into the field; the waste from slaughter-houses and cold storage plants, and the sweepings from the streets are to be turned over to them at a very low cost. Not only will vegetables be grown in greater quantities than ever before, but the preserving of them will be on a larger scale than ever known. The 52 canning and preserving factories at Brunswick (the center of the industry) put up about 200,000 cans of vegetables from last year's crop, as compared with 70,000,000 cans for 1914.

NO DANGER OF ANY
SHORTAGE OF ICEPresident Sam Tall of the City Ice
Company Contracts for Fifteen Hundred Tons From Chicago Firm.

There will be no shortage of ice in Janesville this summer despite the fact the spring breakup came so suddenly that it caught the City Ice company with but a portion of their usual crop harvested. President Sam Tall of the City Ice company returned from Chicago Tuesday night after having purchased fifteen hundred tons of pure lake ice from a large Chicago ice company that was harvested on one of the Wisconsin lakes. In speaking of the situation Mr. Tall said: "There will be no shortage of ice in Janesville this coming summer as far as the City Ice company is concerned, despite the fact we have harvested but half a crop. We have between eleven and twelve thousand tons in the houses and I have just closed a contract for fifteen hundred more tons to assure us plenty of ice during the coming summer and can secure more if we need it."

SHE GROWS NERVOUS AT NIGHT.
FALL.
More dreaded than an alarm of fire by night is the house-brassy cough of a nervous mother who fears this terror of childhood. Why worry, why look on the approach of night with dread, when a few timely doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will ward off the approach of a cough and clear the throat of the choking phlegm. Do not think the too good to be true, get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and it will give you confidence to face nightfall without fear of cough. Mrs. Benj. Clark, Clymer, N. RESPOND TO COUNTRY CALL

Evansville, March 16.—Shortly after noon yesterday an alarm of fire was turned in from the William Hubbard farm, one and a half miles north of the city. The hook and ladder company responded at once, making the trip in the new Jeffrey quad truck recently purchased by the county. The fire proved to be a straw pile containing fifteen or twenty tons of straw, and within eight feet of a large shed.

The flames were extinguished in a very short time without any damage to the shed, which was rather miraculous considering its nearness to the building and the direction of the wind. The origin of the fire is unknown. Frank Franklin is spending a few days here with his family. E. M. Patterson was the recent guest of his son Daryl and wife in Madison. Brooks Gabriel has gone to Woodstock, where he has secured a position. Miss Catherine Green Wood is on the sick list. Dr. J. M. Evans was a Janesville visitor yesterday. The ladies of St. John's Guild met yesterday afternoon in the vestry room. Rev. Le Roy Jahn spent Wednesday and Thursday in Jefferson.

John Gory of Attica was a business visitor here yesterday. Rev. Mason of Oshkosh is here and Friday night will take charge of the St. John's services.

August Krause of Attica transacted business here Wednesday. Wrennie Buxton of Woodstock was a mid-week visitor here.

Ed Slavson of Janesville visited local friends yesterday. A number of Evansville citizens attended the International Peace lecture given by ex-President Taft in Janesville last night.

WANTED—Rags, 3 cents per pound. Eugene Williams. 3-16-31.

You Need a "Real" Corset

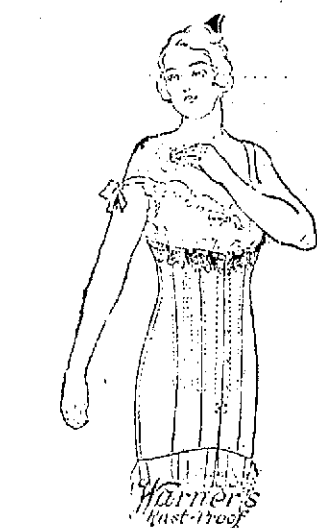

DURING the past few seasons styles have permitted more or less freedom in the wear of the corset. It has not been thought necessary by many women to wear the well boned models of the distant past.

This has, however, been carried to extremes, and we know of many instances today where women with a charming figure two or three years ago are now almost shapeless.

Fashions this season demand the corsetted figure, and even if your own figure has not begun to lose its graceful lines through improper corsetting, you will be on the safe side for the future by selecting a real corset.

By a "real" corset we mean a corset that will actually support your figure but will not bind. We have an admirable stock for you to select from, but particularly recommend the new models of
